David R. Rojas As Time Goes By

David R. Rojas, retired professional artist, exhibits his work reflecting his interest in folk art, wildlife, farms and barns, early American architecture, and the southwest. His over two decades of showing his art throughout the country include displaying his work at Art Basel in Miami, Pier 39

Art Festival in Manhattan, the Easton Wildlife Festival in Maryland, The Boardwalk Art Festival at Virginia Beach, VA, and the Hot Air Balloon Festival in Albuquerque, NM. His paintings are rendered in the "Primitive" folk art style, celebrating the memorable past with each brushstroke. "My creative joys are the diverse subjects that fuel my attraction to the honesty and vividness of American Folk Art, especially in antique bird decoy carvings, Shaker and Amish architecture, barns, farms, villages and historical buildings. Extensive field observations, personal study of wildfowl anatomy, coloration, habits and environments are german to my paintings."

In his youth, David lived in Los Angeles, CA, and considers himself an escapee from Southern California, happily living with his wife Caryll in Del Rey Oaks.
